Masculinity Reconsidered

Presented by

Bruce E. Reis, Ph.D.

Discussion led by Paul Brinich, PhD

Feminist and Queer Studies approaches have reshaped and rethought intellectual discourse on the social construction of gender. New conceptions stress the "essential contradictions" of gender, its fluidity and multiplicity. Bruce Reis applies these insights clinically to heterosexual masculinity, describing a masculinity that is not based on repudiation of the feminine and is not reduced to its social functions. Far from being monolithic, it is contextual, subjective and emotionally open.

Bruce Reis, Ph.D. is on the faculty of the New York University Postdoctoral Program in Psychotherapy and Psychoanalysis; the Institute for Contemporary Psychotherapy and the Stephen A. Mitchell Center for Relational Studies. He is a frequent contributor to Contemporary Psychoanalysis and Psychoanalytic Dialogues on the topic of intersubjectivity and is a Contributing Editor of the journal Studies in Gender & Sexuality. His Heterosexual Masculinities, co-edited with Robert Grossmark, will be released in February. Dr. Reis' practice is located in lower Manhattan.

"This erudite, compassionate and beautifully edited collection is going to be a benchmark for the engagement of psychoanalysis with the masculinities." - Andrew Samuels, Ph.D., Professor of Analytical Psychology, University of Essex
